CHARGE OF MAIMONIDES

"May He, the Almighty Father of Mercy, be with you in all your efforts to heal the sick.
"May you be filled with love for your art and for your fellow man.
"May the thirst for gain and desire for fame be far from your heart, for these are the enemies of pity and ministers of hate.
"May your strength be preserved that you may be able to restore the strength of the rich and the poor, the good and the bad, the friend and the foe.
"May you see in the sufferer the man alone.
When wiser men teach you, may you be humble to learn, for the mind of man is so limited, and the art of healing is so vast.
"May there never arise in you the notion that you know enough, but may you always have strength, leisure, and zeal to enlarge your knowledge.
"Work is great and the mind of man presses forward forever.
"You have been chosen to watch over the life and death of the creatures of the Most High, and from the Most High will come the guidance and strength that shall make this immense work of avail."

OATH OF HIPPOCRATES

I solemnly pledge myself to consecrate my life to the service of humanity.

I will give to my teachers the respect and gratitude which is their due;

I will practice my profession with conscience and dignity;

The health of my patient will be my first consideration;

I will respect the secrets which are confided in me;

I will maintain by all means in my power, the honor and the noble traditions of the medical profession;

My colleagues will be my brothers;

I will not permit considerations of religion, nationality, race, party politics, or social standing to intervene between my duty and my patient;

I will maintain the utmost respect for human life, from the time of conception; even under threat, I will not use my medical knowledge contrary to laws of humanity.

I make these promises solemnly, freely, and upon my honor.

Dr. Steven I. Gutman joined the faculty at SUNY at Buffalo in July 1981 as an assistant professor of Pathology. He received his M.D. from Cornell University Medical College in 1974 then proceeded to residency training in both Anatomic Pathology at New York Hospital, Cornell University (1974-76) and Clinical Pathology at the Mayo Graduate School of Medicine (1976-78). Upon completion of his residency training Dr. Gutman remained at the Mayo Clinic as assistant professor of Pathology for two years (1978-80). He then proceeded to a position in pathology at Municipal Hospital of Bedford until he came to the VAMC in Buffalo.

In the short time he has been in Buffalo Dr. Gutman has become very active in university, medical college and community affairs. He is honored as a member of Phi Beta Kappa, received the Dean's letter for outstanding teaching for SUNY at Buffalo 1981-84, he received John E. Foley Award for Outstanding Federal Professor in 1984, and in 1985 he received the Seigel Award for Outstanding Preclinical teaching at which time he also became Chief of Laboratory services at the Buffalo VAMC. In addition, his academic commitment is further reflected in numerous publications and abstracts that he has authored or co-authored on a variety of pertinent clinical subjects.

Dr. Gutman has been a lecturer in our General and Clinical Pathology courses at SUNY at Buffalo Med. since he has been here. He is particularly remembered by the Class of 1986 for his wit, enthusiasm and commitment toward both his work and his teaching. We have enjoyed working with him in BOTH preclinical and clinical years, his teaching being remarkable for its practicality and straightforward presentation.

The Class of 1986 wishes to express its gratitude to Dr. Steven I. Gutman for his contribution to our medical training both academically and professionally by dedicating our 1986 IRIS to him. — Thank you Dr. Gutman.

Class of 1986
Dear 1986 Graduate:

Congratulations! You and your family have persevered to reach a milestone destined to last members of your peers and our future. As you participate in the joy and rewards of being a physician, it is my hope and prayer that you take time to reflect on the hard work and dedication that was required of each of you throughout the past years that made this achievement a reality as you prepare to enter the next phase of professional development and maturation. Hopefully, if we have done our job as a faculty correctly, you will be well-prepared both as disciplined scientific thinkers and as well-informed humanitarians to perform optimally as residents and ultimate to enter the practice of medicine from there to some years from now. When we see that moment pass you to reflect on your professional status and success, I hope that you will look back and find that the time spent at Buffalo's medical school was constructive, important and contributory to your professional well being and development.

You enter medicine at an exciting time. In contrast to previous graduates, you enter at a time when many courses have been uncharted. You will be faced with moral challenges that will take place that the profession is accustomed to dealing with. Then, you will be charged to deal with more ambiguity, to make more critical decisions both about patients and yourselves, and to participate in providing the leadership necessary to moving the medical profession to greater heights of accomplishment and responsibility. The faculty and I have wanted you to enter as professionals and as individuals; we know you are up to the challenge. Remember, even though you are moving onward, we at Buffalo are still available to assist and participate in the next phase of your professional development. Good Luck!

Sincerely,
John Naughton, M.D.
Vice President for Clinical Affairs
Dean, School of Medicine

ASSOCIATE DEAN'S ADDRESS

Sir William Osler said that the making of a new physician is not a college course, not a medical course, but a life course, for which the work of a few years under teachers is but a preparation. Now that you have reached an important milestone along this journey, your parts will change significantly and you will assume an increasing share of the responsibility for your continued education. Are you ready?

While you have been in medical school, our profession has undergone sweeping changes. Although some inevitable truths have emerged, the only thing that seems certain is that, in the words of William Osler, "We are where we want to be, and we ain't; where we've got to be, but we ain't where we want to be." In such uncertain times, many wonder whether their medical education will prepare them adequately for the future. Fear not!

Here at Buffalo, you have picked up a sizeable amount of "baggage" for the remainder of your life. If you have done your job well, this will be an "enlightening," light rather than a burden, and will make your journey more successful and enjoyable. Beyond the fact-finding of facts to medical students, Osler enjoined us to give them good methods and a proper point of view, and all this will be added in their experience grows. You now have three tools; if you use them with the same enthusiasm, compassion, resourcefulness and ingenuity that you brought to medical school, your careers will be marked by satisfaction, joy and excitement, and you will enhance our profession. Congratulations and Bon Voyage!

Pre-Clinical Message

Congratulations! I’m so pleased and happy to be selected to write the Pre-Clinical message. It’s like a shot of B12 — which I probably do need after 24 years on the faculty.

You students have given me much that I prize. I prize the opportunity I’ve had to share your GROWTH. My additional age, avoir du poiss and greying hair are evidence of this.

Despite the facetious comment, I sincerely mean it when I say that I have grown too — along with you and BECAUSE of you.

You have worked long and hard for the degree "MD".

The formalities of the learning the basics are completed and you move on as professionals to deal with other human beings in a quite singular fashion.

As a physician you deal with what Harry Stack Sullivan called the "invincible self". You deal with both the physical and the psychological — the body and the mind — the soma and the psyche which are inextricably interwoven and never to be seen as separate entities.

You are licensed to touch upon flesh and bone, sense and spirit, and fear and fantasy where others dare not interfere.

In the hopes that these wishes may act to implement a sense of fulfillment for your throughout your career in medicine, I wish the following:

May you live with a LAW OF ACCOUNTABILITY — that is — may you assume the responsibility for your own actions as opposed to projecting and attributing your own unacceptable acts or ideas to others.

May you exercise SELF CONTROL through foresight — forego the immediate for future reward — as opposed to "primary process" thinking which propels one to immediate gratification.

May you have the capacity to maintain good INTERPERSONAL RELATIONSHIPS — be people who need people — act dependably in relation to others.

May you remember that conformity is a dubious guide to conduct. When it is your honest conviction that procedures or protocol are inappropriate and that implementation of your values will lead to a better state of affairs, may you undertake NON-CONFORMITY. Always be ready to accept the possible consequences of your action. Don’t run away from possible punishment. Take a firm stand in support of what you believe.

May you maintain the democratic social interest that is essential to the practice of good medicine, the "SOCIAL CONSCIENCE" that you younger breed of physicians evidence.

May you continue to try to live up to ideals and standards that you have established. Set an optimum discrepancy between your own self concept and your "ego ideal". Let the distance between where you believe you are and the goal of where you want to be — be such that you can always move forward and reach it — only to set yet another goal.

Clinical Message

MECHANICS OR HEALERS? Once I was asked to see a 50 year old lady who had severe disabling chronic urticaria for six or seven months. Several doctors had been unable to find a cause or provide much help with drugs. After going over the history in detail I inquired about how things were in the patient’s emotional life. She broke into tears and told me that her family had sold her restaurant out from underneath her without having discussed it. She was shocked and saddened by this event but bottled it up. When she told me this part of the story she broke down into tears and coincidentally or otherwise, having unbeknownst herself of this hurt her hives disappeared within a few days.

In the past four years you have heard from time to time about the "science" of medicine and also the "art" of medicine. In a way the science part of it all is the easiest, packing away, as we all must, the FACTS of altered cell and organ system function that leads to disease and use of the incredibly sophisticated techniques to detect these abnormalities. Possessed of this information we can act mechanically, if you will, to diagnose and treat but that is not all that is truly required of physicians. Yes, it’s true, we must apply the most advanced techniques to diagnose and treat but if we only do these things in a mechanical way, we are not doing the complete job of physicianship and we’ll miss much of importance in a patient’s life story and we will partly fail as physician-scientists.

Why fail? Because we aren’t CARING, I think. This incredibly important word, is central to the "practice" of medicine, one that is very much connected to the "art" of medicine, and one that usually is not accorded the importance it deserves because it’s hard to define or quantify or teach about; we vary in our native abilities to provide it, but for the patient it is the single most important feeling that he/she perceives as we go about our business of healing.

Caring requires concern about "how things are going" above and beyond the set of symptoms provided by the history and the results of various studies. Whether it is a sickle cell crisis, an attack of asthma, a G-I bleed or an ordinary cold, the situation demands of us not only the application of all our diagnostic and therapeutic potential.

In a word, graduates, be the best medical scientist you can become, but also take time to be great CARERS and HEALERS at the same time! That’s the challenge. “For the most high cometh healing.”

May all your efforts fulfill the symbolic and social potentials that are distinctively human and humane.

I know that these are only value judgements — and that I’m not right and I’m not wrong — but they’re based on my convictions.

I believe that you believe — and so Class of 1986 — in the words of Kahlil Gibran’s Prophet:

"Farewell to you and the youth I have spent with you. It was but yesterday — we met in a dream."

After 18 years of distinguished leadership, Dr. Felix Milgrom relinquished his duties as Chairman of the Department of Microbiology, School of Medicine, SUNY at Buffalo, on August 31, 1985, and is now devoting all of his time to teaching and research.

Felix Milgrom received the academic distinction of appointment as Distinguished Professor in 1981, following a long and fruitful career in teaching, research and administration that began 40 years ago in Poland. He received his medical degree in 1946 from the University of Wroclaw, Poland, and the Docent degree, which is equivalent to an American Ph.D., in 1951. By 1954 he was an internationally recognized immunologist; he had attained the rank of professor and was chairman of the Department of Microbiology at the Silesian School of Medicine at Zabrze-Rokitnica, Poland.

In 1958, Dr. Milgrom accepted an offer from the late Dr. Ernest Witebsky, the former chairman of the Department here and joined the Department as a research associate. In six years he achieved the rank of professor, and in 1967 he succeeded Dr. Witebsky as chairman. The following year, together with Dr. Witebsky and other senior members of the Department, he established the Center for Immunology, a move that has given international recognition to the Department, as well as to the School of Medicine and the University.

Felix Milgrom's academic heritage, which can be traced back to the "father of immunology," Paul Ehrlich, has had a strong influence on his approach to research. Today, he is one of a few scientists with profound knowledge of the entire field of immunology.

Dr. Milgrom has made significant contributions in many areas of immunology including organ transplantation, human blood groups and serum groups, autoimmunity, renal immunopathology, and tumor immunology.

Felix Milgrom's achievements are well recognized in the national as well as the international scientific community. He enjoys the reputation as one of the world's leading immunologists, with over 400 scientific publications to his credit. He has been the mentor of over 80 Ph.D. students and postdoctoral fellows, many of whom have made their mark in research and occupy key positions in the academic community of their respective countries.

Dr. Milgrom's accomplishments have been recognized by the awarding of several honorary doctor of medicine degrees: by the University of Vienna, Austria, in 1976; by the University of Lund, Sweden, and the University of Heidelberg, Germany, in 1979; and by the University of Bergen, Norway, in 1980.

We are here not to get all we can out of life for ourselves, but to try to make the lives of others happier. It is not possible for anyone to have better opportunities to live this lesson than you will enjoy. The practice of medicine is an art, not a trade; a calling, not a business; a calling in which your heart will be exercised equally with your head.

To Willy: Thanks for all your love, patience and friendship. Most of all thanks for your belief in me. Without you, I would never have been able to make it through. You kept me going when I was ready to give up and helped me through the bad times. We are not far from home there, so look to the future with all the joys it will bring. I love you.

To my family and friends: Thanks for being there when I needed a shoulder to lean on and for putting up with me when I was going through some rough times. You have made the unpleasant times bearable and the good times memorable. Thanks, I love you all.
To my parents:
You always had faith in me, even when I didn't. I love you very much and I am eternally grateful for all you have done.

To my wife:
Thank you for always being there when I needed you, and for being the greatest

"Money will not purchase happiness for the man who has no concept of what he wants; money will not give him a code of values, if he's evaded the knowledge of what to value, and it will not provide him with a purpose, if he's evaded the choice of what to seek. Money will not buy intelligence for the fool, or admiration for the coward, or respect for the incompetent. The men who attempt to purchase the brains of his superiors to serve him, with his money replacing his judgment, ends up by becoming the victim of his inferiors."

... The titanic victory achieved, Pantagruel summoned his companions. All of them turned out to be safe and sound, except for Epistemon, tragically decapitated.
"Ah, fell death!" Eusthenes lamented. "Thou hast robbed us of the most perfect of men."
"Don't waste your tears, lads," Panurge replied. "He's still warm." ... He straightaway cleaned Epistemon's head and neck very thoroughly with white wine, and anointed them with a mysterious salve. He then very carefully sewed sinew to sinew, nerve to nerve, and joint to joint. This being done he sewed the head to the neck with some fifteen or sixteen stitches to prevent its falling off again. Suddenly, Epistemon began to breathe, then he opened his eyes, yawned, sneezed ... Finally he let a great household fart. "He's healed now, all right!" Panurge exclaimed ...

Caring is a way of life

Portrait of human compassion.
Of a person who understands that medical hardware and modern technology are mere tools.
That, often, what counts most is a reassuring hand.
An understanding smile. An extra bit of comfort.
This is a caring person. The kind found at Millard Fillmore Hospitals.
We've led the way in caring since we opened our doors over a century ago. In caring for the sick. For their families. For our entire community.
And we will continue that leadership in the years to come. Because to Millard Fillmore people, caring is much more than a job. It's a way of life.
